SOVIET VISITORS IN HUNGARY

Last Saturday, V. I. Gikushin visited the DIMAVAG (Diosgyori Magyar Allami Vas-, Acél-és Gépgyár, Hungarian State Iron, Steel, and Machine Factory of Disogyor), where he discussed questions pertaining to the manufacture of machine tools. Later he visited the Ozdi Kohászati Művek (Ozd Metallurgical Works). In the evening he visited the Machine Technological Institute in Budapest and met members of the mechanization section of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences.

Valery Pavlovich Druzín, editor in chief of Zvezda [monthly publication of Union of Soviet Writers], participated last Sunday at the second national conference of the provincial theaters. In the afternoon he went to Miskolc and inspected the Kazincbarcika construction project. Monday, Druzín went to Eger and, on his way back to Budapest, stopped at Aszd for a short time.

Yury Millyutin, Stalin Prize winning composer, went to the Budapest Municipal Theater last Sunday. Later, together with Raissa Struchkova and Yury Kondratov, he went to a meeting of Hungarian artists.

N. K. Goncharov, corresponding member of the Academy of Pedagogic Sciences /RFSFR/, visited the Budapest Teacher Training Institute last Monday.

Sergey Bondarchuk, Stalin Prize winning film actor, visited the Tata-banya coal mines last Friday.
